

Objective

I can quote accurately from the text, when explaining inferences I have drawn from my reading.

Meaning

While you are reading, you will make inferences. Inferences are when you use what you already know (your schema) and clues and evidence from the book to make a conclusion or judgment.

9/7/16

Making Inferences 1

Alexa couldn't believe it! She usually played defense, but today her coach had put her as a forward because he had a good feeling about something. His feeling was right! She had done it! Her team lifted her up on their shoulders with huge smiles on their faces. They were going to the championship.

① Alexa is playing a sport.

② She is probably playing soccer or basketball.

③ She did something good.

④ Maybe she scored a goal for her team.

⑤ Her team was excited.

Making Inferences 2

Rylee's hands were sweating and she felt like her stomach was going to lose its contents very quickly. She gathered her courage, walked to the front of the room, and looked at 23 sets of eyes staring up at her. Now she was really hoping she could remember everything she had learned about Abraham Lincoln.

① Rylee is nervous about something.

② She doesn't feel very good.

③ She has to talk in front of 23 people.

④ She has to give a presentation or speech.

⑤ Her speech is about Abraham Lincoln.

Objective

I can quote accurately from the text, when explaining inferences I have drawn from my reading.

Meaning

While you are reading, you will make inferences. Inferences are when you use what you already know (your schema) and clues and evidence from the book to make a conclusion or judgment.

9/7/16

- ① The text says, "She usually played defense but today her coach had told her she would be playing forward," which makes me infer that Alexa is playing soccer. Soccer has a defense and forwards.
- ② The text says, "his feeling was right. She had done it," which makes me infer that Alexa had scored a goal.

- ① The text says, "Rylee's hands were sweating and she felt like her stomach was going to lose its contents very quickly," which makes me infer that Rylee is nervous about something.
- ② The text says, "She was really hoping she could remember everything she had learned about Abraham Lincoln," which makes me infer that she is giving a presentation about Abraham Lincoln.